

FREE Healthcare Provider Training Workshops

Improve families' quality of life and well-being through informed shared decision-making using culturally appropriate strategies

TRUST: Families & Providers making Healthy COVID-19 Decisions

CME and CEU credit available

Virtual and in-person FREE training workshops are offered. Custom dates and times are available for groups of five or more.

Introduction to Cultural Humility and Health Equity in response to COVID-19

Participants will define health equity and distinguish between cultural humility and cultural competence.

Effective Cross-Cultural Communication to Mitigate COVID-19 Vaccine Hesitancy

Participants will define health literacy, and "teach back" method to improve health care communication.

Advancing Health Equity through the National Culturally and Linguistically Appropriate Services (CLAS) Standards

Participants will identify CLAS themes and organization health equity checklist.

Uncovering the Wounds of Structural Racism in Health Care

Participants will explore historical context of medical racism and the impacts of biases.

Purpose

The City of Jacksonville received a federal funded grant to Enhance Equitable Community Responses to COVID-19. In collaboration with the Partnership for Child Health, Health Planning Council of Northeast Florida, and Voices Institute health literacy educators will train a minimum of 1,500 health care providers through June 2023.

Audience

Professionals who provide and support health care for high risk, low trust clients:

- Medical professionals and health support workers
- Community Health Workers
- Students in health-related fields of study
- Community and faith-based stakeholders

Contact

Partnership for Child Health, Health Literacy Program Coordinator

- Bonnie C. Atwater
bonniea@pchjax.org
904.648.6097